Having Bro Pa teach this class was incredible. He taught the concepts in a simple and engaging way. The things he taught covered more than just what we need in schools, but also things that are important for life too. He wasn't afraid to talk about controversial things and made sure to let us know when something was his opinion and not a hard fact. When he did talk about controversial things he was good at exploring all sides so that we could really grasp what the fight on this topic was over. You could feel his love for us coupled with his desire to see us succeed; such that he pushed us to do our best. He has changed my view on education more than anyone else and I want to take more classes from him. He is a great teacher.

Confusion is the main problem in this class. Once we finally figured out what we were doing he would change everything. We figured it out but It made it 2x harder.
Brother Pacini does a great job of teaching you first how to find flaws in arguments and how to find good articles. Then lets you research yourself.
i love him
This class was confusing. I also know we learned things not part of the actual ed 200 course, he stated that. Truly gives out way too much work. I know he said it was his first time teaching this course, but we never knew when or what assignments actually were. I think a big thing is he would have multiple names/definitions for one assignment, but you would think it was four different things. Or he would decide to give an assignment in class, and forget about it. He also would talk about the canvas assignments, and then you would click on it and actually have 4-5 other things to do that were not mentioned/explained. Then you would ask about them and he didn't remember that part of the assignment. I felt I learned the most when he actually explained, not just his opinion either. Most the time it was just researching on my own about a topic or learning from my group. It would have been more effective to actually lecture a bit more. We waste a lot of time (almost 20-30 minutes) with announcements, memes, and reels. I feel this could be shortened and get to the actual lesson. Very nice person, and strives to always be approachable. Definitely needs more organization, and structure.
Brother Pacini has been one of my favorite teachers by far. You can tell he is passionate about what he teaches and wants all his students to succeed.
Brother Pacini was an excellent professor, he did a great job at helping us learn how to teach. I appreciated the weekly teaches and the memes, as well as his willingness to learn and grow. I understand that this was the first time he was teaching this course and because of such there's a lot that he had to learn and change as the semester progressed. Overall, it was a good class, a little bit unorganized but overall I enjoyed it.
Brother Pacini is the best professor I have ever had at BYUI. Please have him teach a seminar or something and inspire other professors to care as he does. He is a wonderful example of high love and high expectations. He changed so much for me this semester.
